BATTLE OF CLONTARF GOOD FRIDAY, 1014

Picture the scene: hoards of Viking warriors, driven from Clontarf Strand by Brian Boru, High King of Ireland. They would ultimately have their revenge; the legendary warlord would be slain as he knelt in prayer, close to where Clontarf Castle Hotel still stands today.

GEORGE FRIDERIC HANDEL 1685 – 1759

Regarded as one of the greatest composers of the Baroque era, Handel was a regular guest at the castle during the Dublin premiere of his famous work Messiah.

Captivated by Dorothy “Dolly” Vernon, lady of Clontarf Castle’s charms, Handel would compose Forest Music in her honour.

Dolly’s legacy would be remembered in the christening of Dollymount, one of Clontarf’s finest neighbourhoods.

JOSEPH MALLORD WILLIAM TURNER 1775 – 1851

Dating from circa 1816/7 this depiction of Clontarf Castle by Turner is the artist’s only known Irish work. Resident and country squire John Vernons daughter Maria Sophia was then the wife of Turner’s patron Walter Fawkes. Some say Turner (who is not thought to have visited Dublin) painted the piece as a reminder for Maria Sophia of her beloved childhood home in Dublin.

ABRAHAM “BRAM” STOKER 1847 – 1912

Irish author, best known for his 1897 world famous Gothic novel... “Dracula”

Just a short walk away from Clontarf Castle Hotel sits an elegant townhouse with a bright red door. It was inside 15 The Crescent that a child’s imagination began to swirl around dark and eerie Gothic tales, learned at bedtime by his mother’s rocking chair. Born in 1847 and author of Dracula, Bram Stoker remains one of the most famous Clontarf residents in history today.

Clontarf Castle’s ivy-clad turrets and suits of armour are known to every Dubliner. Share its story in this tranquil setting, just 10 minutes from Dublin City Centre and five miles from the airport.
